Dear Dilly, Aug. 2

This picture was taken about 10 years ago - the building is torn down now. a gang of us is going camping at
Chase Lake in about two weeks.

I haven't done much except sleep since I got here. This country air is the next best - Love, Jim

The Pines

CHASE'S LAKE, N. Y.

“THE PINES”

CHASE'S LAKE

LEWIS COUNTY, N. Y.

HASE'S LAKE is situated on the border of the Great North Woods, more generally known as the Adirondacks. It is about fifty miles north of Utica, six and one-half miles from Glenfield Station, and ten miles from Lowville, on the Black River Branch of the New York Central Railroad.

Elevation and Outlook.

The elevation of over twelve hundred feet above the sea and about four hundred feet above the Black River Valley, together with the location on the edge of the great plateau which borders the Black River Valley, affords at once an extensive view and a greater variety of scenery than is usual at resorts of this character.

WEST FRONT.

COTTAGES.

The House and Grounds.

THE PINES, with its commodious and comfortable cottages will accommodate from fifty to sixty people ; is situated in a beautiful grove of pines upon an arm of and about eighty rods from the lake, which is easily reached by boats and pleasant walks.

The house has large, airy rooms ; is most comfortably furnished ; has no bar, and may be considered as a home rather than as a hotel. A rest upon its wide verandas or upon the seats or hammocks in the grove will be appreciated when it is realized that there is a comfortable breeze during the hottest days in summer, and an almost entire absence of the assortment of winged pests usually found in woods resorts.

NORTH FRONT AND ANNEX.

The Table and Gardens.

GUESTS may expect that the delicacies of the season and locality, with plenty of milk and cream, will appear upon the table, and that trout and venison will be served as often as possible in the proper seasons, while the extensive gardens insure an abundance of the freshest vegetables.

Appreciating the desirability of the careful preparation and serving of food, the management takes especial pains with these features.

PART OF THE GROVE.

Chase's Lake.

NO words can overstate the beauties of this sheet of water. Lying like a mirror in a frame of green, it must be seen to be fully appreciated. Here the tired brain may rest, the pine-clad bank affording secure refuge from the bustling world, while no cottages or other signs of civilization distract the eye. One can easily imagine a thousand miles intervening between himself and the hurry and worry of business life. Hours and days may be spent in the stillness of this wilderness in perfect security.

The lake is somewhat over a mile in length, but so irregular in its outline that it has a coast line of over five miles, with beautifully wooded shores and islands, and a pleasant variety of rocky points and sandy beaches. A bath house at the head of a secluded bay with a white sand beach affords a safe and desirable place for bathers.

A VIEW OF THE LAKE.

Boat and Carriage Livery.

PLENTY of safe, dry and clean boats are kept near the house, and are furnished to guests for temporary use free of charge, while for a reasonable charge rowing or sailing boats may be hired by the week or month for exclusive use, and comfortable and safe equipages for driving can be had at a moderate cost.

Walks, Drives and Amusements.

PLEASANT walks along the shaded shores of the beautiful lake, or along the wooded banks of the Independence River near by, may be enjoyed by all, but especially will they be appreciated by the lover of wild flowers, which are found on every hand.

ON THE LAKE

An excellent tennis court and croquet ground are in the grove near the house, and in connection with the house are a first-class bowling alley and a shuffle board. These, with the boating, bathing and driving, offer healthful recreation to all, while a safe swing, and piles of clean white sand afford special amusements for children.

Hunting and Fishing.

DURING the season for stream fishing trout may be caught in the number of small streams in the vicinity and also in the Independence River, not far away. The Upper Independence and its tributaries afford many miles of good fishing through the season for those who do not mind trips and camping in the woods.

Deer are plenty in the hunting season, and experienced sportsmen rarely fail to get one or more without many miles of travel. In fact it is not uncommon to see deer in the woods near the house and from the lake.

BATH HOUSE AND BEACH.

Accessibility, Mail and Telephone.

THE ride of from sixty to ninety minutes from the railroad gives Chase's Lake an advantage over similar resorts in this part of the State in its accessibility and in the ease with which the tired traveler can reach this haven of rest while the telephone connections with the great systems of the State, and with the Western Union Telegraph Company, and the early morning mail each day, give guests a touch with the world which will be especially appreciated by those who have formerly gone to the more remote resorts for their summer rest.

Summary.

IT IS safe to say that there is no other place of resort along the border of the Northern New York Wilderness that combines so many requisites for a comfortable vacation as does Chase's Lake.

Its accessibility and the consequent ease with which medical attendance can be had in case of necessity, together with the early mail and wire communications, allow a touch with affairs even while out of sight, sound and the bustle of civilization. It is the ideal spot for the tired brain, nerve and muscle to rest.

ON THE OUTLET.

The sandy soil affords pure, soft water and excellent drainage, and the clear, invigorating air is an especial boon to persons afflicted with hay-fever or kindred difficulties.

Suitable conveyances at reasonable charge will be sent to Glenfield or Lowville upon application. Terms by the week, ten dollars and upward, according to season and accommodations. By the day, two dollars and two dollars and fifty cents. Children occupying places at the table or requiring dining service, full rates. All others half price. Address all communications to
